

4-9-2011

Chicago and Fort Wayne: Cities of History and Community

Matthew Rybicki

Indiana University - Purdue University Fort Wayne

Patricia Wheis

Indiana University - Purdue University Fort Wayne

Follow this and additional works at: http://opus.ipfw.edu/stu_symp2011

Part of the History Commons

Recommended Citation

Matthew Rybicki and Patricia Wheis (2011). Chicago and Fort Wayne: Cities of History and Community.
http://opus.ipfw.edu/stu_symp2011/52

This Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the IPFW Student Research and Creative Endeavor Symposium at Opus: Research & Creativity at IPFW. It has been accepted for inclusion in 2011 IPFW Student Research and Creative Endeavor Symposium by an authorized administrator of Opus: Research & Creativity at IPFW. For more information, please contact admin@lib.ipfw.edu.

Chicago and Fort Wayne: Cities of History and Community

Matthew Rybicki Patricia Wheis

Dr. Melanie Bookout

Chapman Scholars Program

Indiana University-Purdue University Fort Wayne

In the developing stages of modern Chicago and Fort Wayne, both shared the same humble beginnings. Through these humble beginnings Chicago has turned into one of the most famous cities in the United States while Fort Wayne has formed into one of the largest cities in Indiana. The question presented is "How has the history and communities of Chicago and Fort Wayne molded each city into what it is today?". In order to answer this question, the factors which have been analyzed are the development of each city, the collective history of each city portrays, and the overall since of community of each city. Through analyzing the development of each city, one can see how certain events and certain people laid the foundation for how the cities developed. These historic figures, events, and their significance to each city's since of community is then further highlighted by what each community presents as their past. The statues, park systems, and buildings show how each community preserved what they hold important. Finally, the museums, iconic structures, and arts each city contains show the current evolution of each city and their communities. Although created for similar purposes and starting from the same humble beginnings Chicago and Fort Wayne and evolved into greatly different cities and communities.